

Strategies for Working/Living Abroad

Interested in working in another country? Thinking of volunteering for a year overseas? There are many important things to take into account if you are planning on working abroad. Although many aspects of the job search are similar to jobs you apply for in the U.S., there are also many distinct differences when trying to work in another country. This guide will help you maneuver through some of the challenges of an international job/volunteer search.

Some Questions to Consider ...

- When do I want to go overseas: NOW or a year from now?
- What's more important: a prestigious career-oriented job or actually being overseas? (In other words, am I willing to be a nanny or a hotel clerk as long as I'm overseas?)
- Do I want or need more education before I go? Do the jobs I'm interested in require a master's degree or teacher certification?
- Do I need to get more experience in my career field before I try to find a job overseas?
- Am I willing to volunteer or do I only want a paid job?
- Am I considering going to just one country, one of several countries, or anywhere so long as it's overseas?
- Have I been overseas before? If not, am I ready and willing to handle the many changes?

Before you go: Passports, working papers, etc.

You will need a passport to travel abroad and to return to the U.S. If you have one, check the date of issuance to make sure it won't expire before you return. If you don't have one yet, expect the process to take one to two months. You can apply for a passport through a main post office facility and/or local county clerk's office. You'll need proof of citizenship (certified copy of birth certificate, current valid ID (driver's license), two passport photos, and passport application fee. Visas are needed for some countries. The visa is generally stamped on your passport, and it is wise to obtain it before you leave the US. Contact the US-based foreign consulate or embassy for information about your country of interest.

Quick tips:

- Consider the costs involved — do a budget analysis.
- Make sure your passport is up-to-date.
- Check on health laws/immunization requirements. Contact the Center for Disease Control (www.cdc.gov/) or your doctor

- Find out the working visa requirements for your country of choice.
- Make sure your medical and accident insurance are valid in the country in which you travel. Obtain an International Student Identity Card from The Council on International Education Exchange (www.ciee.org/) — recognized in 62 countries.

Obtaining documentation to work abroad

Most countries require a work permit for full-time and permanent jobs. If you work for the government, an international organization, or a large U.S. corporation, your employer will handle the details. In some countries, such as France, the local employer has to request the papers. It is very difficult to obtain a work permit in another country and the requirements vary from country to country. Often an employer has to prove that the foreign worker is uniquely qualified and a national candidate is not available.

To obtain resident status in a country, usually:

- You already have a job waiting for you;
- You have means to live in a country without working;
- You fulfill government criteria to establish your own business;
- You are descended from or married to a national; or
- You have lived in the country already for a number of years for a reason acceptable to the government, such as being a political refugee.
- You are willing to pay a fee to an organization that will assist you in obtaining a temporary work visa. Then it would be up to the employing organization to sponsor you for longer. (e.g. BUNAC, Global Vision International)

Where are the international jobs?

Ironically, the best opportunities for international employment are in the United States, about 90 percent of internationally employed Americans found their foreign jobs in the United States.

- BUSINESS AND BANKING
- CRIMINAL JUSTICE/LAW
International Law

Border Patrol
FBI
CIA

- CONSULTING FIRMS
- GOVERNMENT
United Nations
- HEALTHCARE
- INFRASTRUCTURE/PUBLIC SERVICE
Construction
Architecture
Public Housing
City Management
- INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION
Teaching English As A Second Language
Teaching at an American or Foreign School abroad
International Education administrator at an American college or university
- NONPROFIT AND RELIEF/VOLUNTEER AGENCIES
Brethren Volunteer Corps
CONCERN/America
Food for the Hungry
Mennonite Central Committee
- PUBLIC POLICY INITIATIVES
Government-Local, State and Federal Consulting
Research Groups
- TECHNICAL FIELDS
Agriculture
Computers
Engineering
- TRAVEL INDUSTRY
Airlines
Hotels/Motels
Tour Groups

BEST U.S. CITIES FOR INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES:

New York: New York is the hub for many businesses including communications and media (advertising, publishing, etc.), nonprofit organizations, finance, trade, and shipping. Many of the film industry's international offices are located in New York. Many international corporations have offices in NYC as well, and often hire Americans.

Washington, D.C.: Virtually every agency in the U.S. government has an international division. In addition,

Washington is host to a variety of lobbying groups, nonprofit organizations, consultants, and think-tanks.

Miami: Miami is a hub for international shipping and trade. Many companies which manufacture their products elsewhere ship through Miami, and have a Miami office.

Philadelphia: serves as a major import/export center and also offers international banking opportunities.

Chicago: is the base for several international consulting firms and also has international banking interests.

San Francisco and Los Angeles: serves as a major connection to the Far East.

INTERNATIONAL JOB WEB RESOURCES

These sites will help you find employment throughout the world. Use keywords like "international," the name of the country in which you would like to work, or the language you speak.

www.csbsju.edu/career/students/postgrad/jobopps.htm. CSB's Career Services' Home page — click on "International Job Resources for U.S. Citizens" to find tons of great Web sites for working abroad including specific country job sites, teaching English abroad, and much more!

www.escapeartist.com/jobs/overseas1.htm. Lots of information on available jobs abroad.

www.councilexchanges.org/. Each year, in the form of overseas study, work and trainee programs, the Council helps nearly 50,000 individuals experience the enriching reality of living in a different cultural environment.

www.onesmallplanet.com. Resource for international work, study, volunteer, and travel opportunities.

www.4icj.com/. 4 International Careers and Jobs, search by country or categories of careers and jobs.

<http://www.overseasjobs.com/>. Search jobs worldwide, register as a member (it's FREE) and post resume, research employers and careers.

<http://www.rileyguide.com/internat.htm>. Resources for international opportunities, including country-by-country lists of Web sites.

<http://www.transitionsabroad.com/>. Monthly magazine dedicated to study abroad, travel and working internationally. Paper copies available in the CSB Career Resource Center.

www.goinglobal.com. Research by country, career or topic area for finding opportunities to work abroad.

www.the-global-citizen.com. Find unique experiences to study abroad, volunteer or work overseas.

www.expertexpert.com. Numerous articles about global living including going abroad, living abroad and coming home. Also includes a vast listing of links to information about working/living abroad.

www.tcglobal.org/directory/index.htm. Looking for a Minnesota company with international ties? Find your way to international organizations, businesses, entertainment, restaurants, and government offices.