

Design and Synthesis of a Bioinorganic Model: synthetic “copper triangles”

In collaboration with Professor Brian Johnson’s group we are engaged in the design and synthesis of Anslyn-type ligands that will coordinate three copper centers. It is anticipated that we will be able to model the geometry of three copper clusters found in multicopper oxidases. This project is discussed in greater detail in Professor Johnson’s research description.

