Course Descriptions

CORE 355-70A / THEO 349-70A: Health & Healing (HMU & JC)

This course explores the fascinating subject of our own health and that of others. Is health merely physical or is it a state of personal well-being? This course examines many dimensions of how we care for ourselves, how we care for others, and we examine why a given choice might be morally acceptable or unacceptable. Recent developments in bio-technology, rapid progress in mapping the human genome, controversies concerning end of life care, decisions about who gets care and who does not--all of these burning issues of our time demand our attention. In this course we reflect on who makes decisions (patient? Doctor? Family? Insurance company? Government administrator?) and why. We consider recent medical and surgical breakthroughs, but we also study the recent phenomenon of doctors challenging other doctors to recognize the healing power of prayer and spirituality and to change their perception of reality. We will incorporate service learning to help us see how these issues apply to real life situations. Clearly this calls us to examine the heritage of healing in the Christian tradition, and our own personal
