Twelve years experience of volunteering on farms in France and living with families

Fall 2019

Summer 2008
Required Course – Cultures of Food in France

• How and why do the French eat differently than Americans do?

• How are cultures of food in France created, enforced, and passed on?

• Why do farmers’ markets, family farms, and small-scale organic production all thrive better in France than they do in the US?

Yes, that is raw beef with a raw egg
Course includes visits to olive oil, cheese, and wine producers in Provence
Marché Forville, Cannes
Course also includes visits to farmers’ markets and optional small group cooking lessons. Learn how to roast a chicken, prepare basic soups, make a quick pasta dish from what you have in your cupboard, and end the semester with recipes for at least a dozen fast and tasty ways to eat your vegetables.
